

Dorjsuren Bayarsaikhan, MPH, Manila, Philippines

Regional Adviser in Health Care Financing at the World Health Organisation (WHO), Regional Office for Western Pacific Region based in Manila, Philippines; Economist with a Masters Degree in Public Health, currently a Doctoral candidate, before joining WHO Vice Minister and Director-General in the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare, Mongolia

Regionalberater für Fragen der Finanzierung des Gesundheitswesens bei der Weltgesundheitsorganisation (WHO), Regionalbüro für die Westpazifische Region mit Sitz in Manila, Philippinen; Wirtschaftswissenschaftler mit einem Universitätsabschluss in Public Health, Doktorand, vor der Tätigkeit bei der WHO Vizeminister und Generaldirektor im Ministerium für Gesundheit und Soziale Wohlfahrt, Mongolei

---

Training Opportunities in Health Care Financing

For those who are interested in enhancing their skills and knowledge in health care financing, this background-information on renowned training opportunities might be useful.

For example, the School of Public Health of Boston University has many years of experience in organising annual courses on health care financing aspects in developing countries. The World Bank Flagship Course on health sector reform and sustainable financing is another good opportunity to learn more about health finance, provider payments, organisational change and regulations. The University of York offers a course on health economics and financing that focuses on the use of economic tools for health financial analysis and decision making. Solid knowledge and worldwide experiences in developing social health insurance can be obtained from a course offered by the International Labour Organization in Turin, and another annual course launched in 2004 by the Republic of Korea in collaboration with the World Health Organization and United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific. The Harvard School of Public Health organizes annual workshop on creating and using national health accounts for health finance reform. Likewise, this catalogue contains extensive information on various training courses in every important area of health care financing offered by a wide range of well-recognised institutions worldwide.